

A Tropical Birding Tours CUSTOM Birding and BWC Tour

Trip Report and Checklist: SURINAME: Trumpeters & Guianan Shield Endemics

October 8th to 18th, 2024

Report and photos by ANDRES VASQUEZ N., the guide for this tour

Getting a photo of the elusive Gray-winged Trumpeters was the target that got this whole tour running. I can safely say we succeeded!!!!

INTRODUCTION: We do not offer Suriname as a Set Departure Tour, but we have run a couple of custom tours to this small but immensely biodiverse country. On this occasion, the inspiration for this custom tour was trying to knock down a nemesis bird family for Ted and Barbara, dear tour participants with whom I have personally spent many frustrating days in three different countries trying to get a photo of any member of the Trumpeter family in their quest to photograph at least one member of each bird family. The best chances for photos of these difficult, shy and elusive birds was offered in Suriname. After designing the basic plan around this objective, (and in order to lower the cost of the trip), we invited another two personally treasured birders, Rick and Andrew, who are not really into the photo side of things but both really wanted to bird this portion of South America, where there were tons of new birds on offer, even after having birded with me for over 15 years in many other corners of the continent.

One of the many specialties we were looking for In this corner of the continent was Crimson Fruitcrow

And, just like that, I had a superb group to guide in terms of guaranteed fun personalities and immense kindness. We only needed to have a good itinerary that balanced the photography and birding elements well together. Happily, due to the particular personalities of all the participants, we made it happen in a way that everybody was very happy with the results at the end of the tour.

The final piece of this puzzle was finding a local guide who would help us with up to date information, and reliable stake outs for the key target species. This is key to have on any tour that takes place within the dense rainforests of the Neotropics in general, and Suriname is no exception. After some research I managed to get Sean, the best bird guide in the country, who, on top of being an incredibly knowledgeable birder, was also very compatible with all of us in terms of sense of humor and much more besides. With all the basic ingredients in place, we had a winner recipe for a great tour and it was.

We found the colorful Guianan Trogon in a couple of different locations

The tour was a huge success, basically nailing ALL of the birds any first time visitor to the so-called Guianan Shield would have on their target list; you name it, we got it: Guianan Cock-of-the-rock, Crimson Fruitcrow, Capuchinbird, Crimson Topaz, Gray-winged Trumpeter, Guianan Red-Cotinga, Blue-backed Tanager, Ferruginous-backed Antbird, Arrow-headed Piculet, Blood-colored Woodpecker, Dusky Purpletuft, Whitewinged Potoo, Crimson-hooded Manakin, Black-spotted Barbet, Guianan Toucanet, Cayenne Jay, Tufted Coquette, Racket-tipped Thorntail, on a list that exceeded 360 species in just 10 days. NARRATIVE: There are four main birding areas that all first time visitors to Suriname should visit: Paramaribo and the surrounding coastal areas, Brownsberg Nature Park, Fredberg Lodge, and the white sand ecosystems near Zanderij. This was the order that the sites were visited on this tour, and it is also the order in which this trip report is laid out, instead of a day-by-day description.

Suriname is for sure off the beaten path in terms of the birding industry and it is not nearly as well developed in terms of birding lodges as other South American countries, such as Ecuador. It also has some quite difficult dirt roads needed to access some of the key birding spots. These factors make the trip an adventurous one. We were very clear about this from the beginning and in fact we were probably expecting lodging to be more basic than it happily turned out to be. Having said that, in Fredberg and Brownsberg we had shared bathrooms. In order to access these two locations, we required a 4 x 4 van that was masterfully maneuvered by our great local guide who tried his best to make it as smooth a ride as possible, but this was simply impossible, and there were a couple of issues with the vehicle, most probably caused by the incredibly rough terrain at these two places. In the end, these were all amusing stories to tell later but at some point, it felt like being in the movie "Little Miss Sunshine".

Birding within the white sands savannah and woodland with our durable van

A chapter on its own is deserved regarding the food in this country. We initially thought that we had experienced the best chef at our first lodge but later realized that Suriname food in general is very rich and super tasty. A surprise to us all. The tasty food reflects the rich culture of the country, and it brought joy to us every day. The people of Suriname were also joyful, nice, very welcoming, and relaxed. There was a generally good vibe throughout the parts of the country we visited. Simply put, we all enjoyed this country much more than expected. There were some surprises along the way, although for the most part these were nice ones!

Sunset time at Brownsberg Nature Park is a breathtaking experience that makes all the effort to reach there, very worthwhile

Finally, I need to mention that this tour had a main tour section, which was participated in by all of the participants, (comprising Brownsberg, Fredberg and Paramaribo), plus a short extension for one person only, specifically targeting the white sand specialties, after the main tour.

PARAMARIBO AREA: We started and finished the main tour by birding the capital city of the country and some nearby birding sites. Despite being a small city for a country capital, it does have the chaotic traffic expected of a big metropolis, so getting around during rush hour took a while.

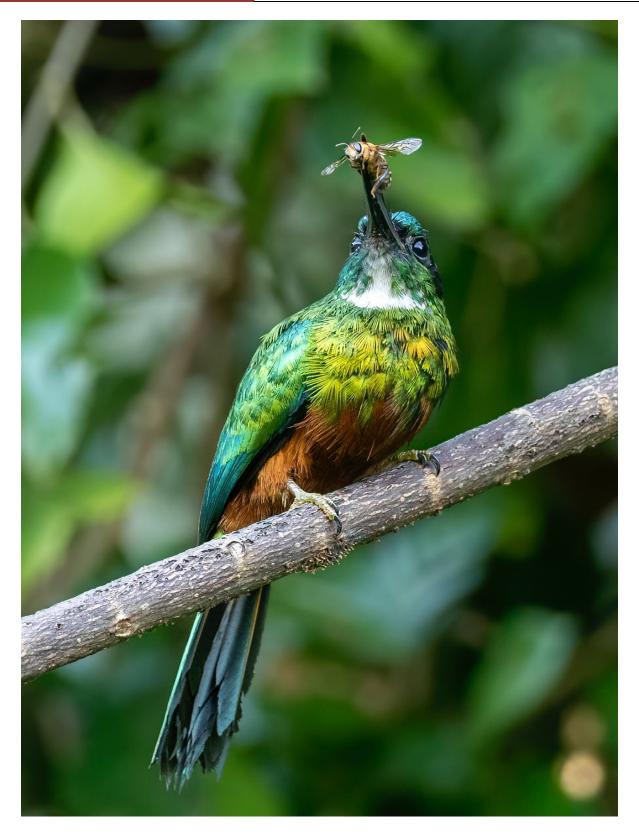

We avoided some of the traffic by going early in the morning to some nice wetlands in the northwestern outskirts of the city where we spent a super, bird-loaded half hour on the tour. In a way, the main avian target of the country has to be the only endemic species present in Suriname, the small but very ornate Arrowhead Piculet which we saw within the first ten minutes of birding this area. Right after that we picked up a couple of other key birds, like Blood-colored Woodpecker and Green-tailed Jacamar. These wetlands produced tons of other species out of which, it is worth mentioning Yellow-hooded Blackbird, Green-rumped Parrotlet, Black-crested Antshrike, plus many wetland species like terns and kingfishers.

We had fabulous views of both male and female e Arrowhead Piculets, which is the only country endemic in Suriname

Later on the same day, and then again at the end of the tour, we visited a famous spot called Chocopot where we targeted a very bright special bird, the glowing Crimson-hooded Manakin. It took us two visits to get good views and photos of a gorgeous male. Another big one for us in the same area was Little Hermit, which also made us work for it. On the plus side, we also found plentiful other birds of interest, like Buff-throated Woodcreeper, Cinnamon Attila, White-winged Becard, Helmeted Pygmy-Tyrant, and Spotted Tody-Flycatcher, to name but a few. While hitting a couple of other woodlots within the city, we also picked up a handful of other species we were aiming for, namely Green-throated Mango, Spectacled Thrush, Pale-tipped Tyrannulet, and a bunch of other more widely distributed species.

A Green-tailed Jacamar working on controlling the local bee population!

Closer to the Atlantic Ocean, we visited a couple of different stake outs that Sean had for other key targets, including the specialized Rufous Crab Hawk that gave us great views and photo opps. We also picked up Plainbellied Emerald and Masked Yellowthroat, both of which were new to all of us. In these areas, we also got great views of migrating Fork-tailed Flycatchers that were abundant, and we also found a couple of other nice raptors, like Savannah and Black-collared Hawks but missed a harrier that we were targeting unfortunately.

Rufous Crab Hawk has a weird, ghostly expression on its face

In total we dedicated two full mornings to the Paramaribo area which were very productive in terms of the number of dedicated targets we had for the area. We were going to spend most of the tour however much further inland where deeper and taller forest are the norm.

BROWNSBERG NATURE PARK: After the first morning around the coastal capital city, we moved inland and upwards to the top of the namesake mountain range that lays right next to the huge Brokopondo Reservoir, and where the modest accommodation sits overlooking the waters from up on high, at approximately 1800ft (500m). The ride up the mountain was a challenge for our van, since the road was in really bad shape.

We needed to walk a bit behind the van on the steeper parts since we had, besides ourselves, all the groceries and supplies for a three-night stay. Sean brought along with us a super nice cook named Kerny who took good care of us with plentiful and very tasty meals while at Brownsberg. It took most of the afternoon for us to finally arrive at our lodge and with only the last half hour of daylight available, we got right to it within the camp grounds. There, a few target birds were seen, which were stated as some of rhe best birds of the trip at the end of it all. These included White-throated and White-fronted Manakins, plus Golden-sided Euphonia, Long-tailed Hermit, Fulvous-crested Tanager and various other common species. From the lookout, we found a brilliant Splangled Cotinga sitting atop a naked branch while we enjoyed the sunset over the gorgeous views of the reservoir that really looked like the ocean at first glance.

White-throated Manakins were seen daily around the lodge thanks to a fruiting tree right behind the kitchen. They were also accompanied by White-fronted and Golden-headed Manakins too!

Over the next couple of days (we had two full days to explore this area), we walked trails and roads that cut right through pristine rainforest. We started picking up a few new birds for the trip, including a couple of secondary targets, but we were anxious to get the principal target of the trip, trumpeters that we were told were very regular inside the forest around the campground, and even within the campsite itself.

We could not fully enjoy the other multiple lifers since the trumpeters remained prominent in the in the back of our heads the whole time and caused us much nervous excitement.

The difficult road up to the lodge, with an unprepared car stranded along the way

Among the birds we found in our first hour of birding were Dusky and Red-fan Parrots, Double-toothed Kite, Guianan Tyrannulet, Buff-cheeked Greenlet and a few more canopy birds that we could also get from the open areas around the campsite. Then, we moved inside the forest and started to get various understory species, like Black-headed Antbird, Mouse-colored Antshrike, and Guianan Warbling-Antbird when, all of the sudden, we spotted a family of Gray-winged Trumpeters that were foraging inside the forest. Sean then started whistling to them and threw a couple of breadcrumbs on the forested road, which led to the birds walking out of the forest interior and giving us amazing views out in the open...

Usually shy and reclusive, Gray-winged Trumpeters were very confiding in Brownsberg

We spent a good twenty minutes with this family of trumpeters taking pictures and simply enjoying them in a way that we normally never have a chance to do elsewhere in the World. I had seen this species multiple times before in the past but had absolutely never enjoyed them so much. For example, I had never had the chance to notice the vibrant, iridescent feathers on the neck and chest before. It was both a great pleasure and a huge relief to us all, as we had been chasing these birds with Ted in various different countries over many, many hours and a considerable number of kilometers! It was, for sure, a great feeling to nail the main target so early on the trip, and gave it a different feel from then on.

The rest of the tour was then dedicated to getting the rest of *the Guianan shield en*demics present in Suriname, or as many as we could find, plus trying to fill in some gaps on the lists of the group from previous tours in the South American tropics. Before we left Brownsberg we found other species that one some trips would be serious contenders for birds of the trip, like the unique Collared Puffbird and the melodious Musician Wren.

We lucked out with this quiet Collared Puffbird (above) that I spotted while trying to get a different bird

Some of the specialties we found in these highlands included Ferruginous-backed Antbird, Chestnut-rumped and Guianan Woodcreepers, Marail Guan, Black-throated Antshrike, Rufous-throated Antbird, Guianan Toucanet, Guianan Puffbird, Golden-collared Woodpecker, Brown-bellied Stipplethroat, Todd's Antwren, Olivaceous Schiffornis, Finch's Euphonia, and the first of multiple Guianan Trogons. Other interesting species we found there included Short-tailed Pygmy-Tyrant (a contender for smallest songbird in the World), Cinereous Mourner, Amazonian Black-throated Trogon, Northern Slaty-Antshrike, Chapman's Swift, Foothill Screech-Owl, Lined Forest-Falcon, Black-faced and Rufous-capped Antthrushes, and many other classic, widespread Amazonian species.

A nice antswarm gave us this Black-throated Antshrike (above) and a second family of Trumpeters

FREDBERG LODGE and grounds: The time came to change sites and drop in elevation. We spent the next three nights in this fairly new birding lodge named Fredberg, after the owner and visionary local guide who was actually trained and encouraged by our guide Sean in the past, and that now runs this nice operation in the central lowlands of Suriname. Located on the edge of a small river, this lodge provides access to a few different habitats, including Riparian and Terra Firme Forests, as well as Granite hills that provide nesting habitat for one of the key birds we were looking for, the bizarre Guianan Cock-of-the-rock.

There was only one male Cock-of-the-Rock in the Lek at this time of the yearm, but we got nice views!!

This was on my personal target list for many years. We were very fortunate to see this glowing male at a very quiet (for this time of the year) lek. Other groups that were staying in the same lodge required 4 visits to the lek to see one. We were very lucky on our only attempt there. Having said that, this was not even the best Cotinga that we had during our stay at Fredberg, since it was eclipsed by the bizarre and unique Capuchinbird and matched by the rare Guianan Red Cotinga and Crimson Fruitcrow in terms of localized bird tick satisfaction! The Cotinga family, as you can see, is very well represented in this region with all of the species mentioned above seen, plus a couple more common ones like Purple-throated Fruitcrow and Screaming Piha.

We were very happy however with the results, especially with the Capuchinbird that was probably the bird of the trip since it made us work hard and we only got it at the last minute during a day in which we focused largely on that species. We also had the chance to hear its amazing, surreal, and loud voice. We got no photos, sadly, but did gain some great memories of this long awaited lifer.

A couple of hundred feet high, this Granite rock formation was home to a beloved orange cotinga

Near the cock-of-the-rock lek site, we also saw our third and final species of Purpletuft (Dusky, also very local), and our seventh and final Potoo (White-winged Potoo). It was such a great feeling to complete these bird families. The potoo was also a superb experience, one of those in which you see the bird after you had already tried lots and had already accepted it was not going to be seen but then, it started calling on the same march back to the vehicle one night.

Other species that we targeted (and got) in this area included Green Aracari, Painted Tody-Flycatcher, Redbilled Pied-Tanager, the bright Blue-backed Tanager, Tufted Coquette, Racket-tipped Thorntail, Painted Parakeet, Tiny Tyrant-Manakin, Lilac-tailed Parrotlet, Glossy-backed Becard, McConnell's Flycatcher, Slenderbilled Xenops, McConnell's Spinetail, Green-tailed Goldenthroat, Black Nunbird, and the local subspecies of Plain-crowned Spinetail that has potential to be a future split and later lifer. Along the edges of the river we also gave specific attention to a few specialties, such as Guianan Streaked Antwren and Black-chinned Antbird that were photographed well, plus Cocoa Thrush and other species of riparian habitats. The one that was a big personal dip was the absolutely spectacular Crimson Topaz which we could not find with the group when we went all together in search for it on a stake out along the river. However, I am very happy that Andrew, the youngest and fittest of the participants, during his steamy-hot-middle-of-the-day jogging session, managed to get to grips with this wonderful bird all on his own!!!

Black Nunbirds are not particularly attractive, but a lifer is a lifer

In order to get all of these special birds, we mostly did a lot of roadside birding, looking for flocks moving near the edge of the forest, and less time was spent trail birding inside the tall woodlands. We rode in our van, mainly along the entrance road, multiple times. Using this strategy, having trained ears was key to finding some of our targets, as was having sharp eyed participants too! Thankfully, the road was largely flat, and the poor condition of the road necessitated us to drive it slowly, which suited us well for these birding purposes too. After three nights in the area we were ready to move back to the capital Paramaribo for another night.

Tufted Coquette (above) female found very close to our cabins and a gorgeous female Guianan Streaked Antwren

Blue-backed Tanager (above) was a huge target and Golden-sided Euphonia was seen best in the lowlands

WHITE SAND FORESTS: The main tour finished after a night in Paramaribo and some final birding trying to fill in some gaps in that region which worked out perfectly in that regard. We managed to pick up four or five new birds that morning out of which the male Crimson-hooded Manakin was outstanding but also seeing Green-throated Mango and Little Hermit made our day. We then moved southwards, and we had our last meal together close to the airport. After a logistical stop for refreshments and changing into our travel clothes, we dropped Ted, Barbara and Andrew at the airport in the early afternoon. During the following couple of days it was going to be only Richard, Sean and I for a little extra birding in search of a handful of White Sand Forest specialties.

Rufous-crowned Elaenia was one of the targets in the white sand savannah

For that we stayed two nights in Colakreek Recreational Park located just a few minutes away from the airport, which was logistically excellent for our goals since the forest and savannahs surrounding the airstrip is where we wanted to bird. That same afternoon we actually headed in that direction and got a few of the targets swiftly, namely Rufous-crowned Elaenia, Red-shouldered Tanager, Campina Thrush, Saffron-crested Tyrant-Manakin, (a nemesis of mine), Crested Bobwhite, and, after dark, a very responsive White-tailed Nightjar at a great stake out provided by Sean.

White-tailed Nightjar (above) and Red-shouldered Tanager

During our full day in at this site we visited a couple of other locations in the same general area. We were basically targeting only a handful of species for lifers, although we did see some nice new trips birds that werte not necessarily targets or lifebirds. The big targets we found that day were Black Manakin and Plumbeous Euphonia, both of which we managed to see very well during the morning. We also got much better views of a couple of recent lifers, like Pompadour Cotinga and Black-spotted Barbet which was a great thing because they were actually seen only quite poorly before.

Plumbeous Euphonia is quite an unusual member of the family

In the afternoon we headed back to the forest south of the airport where we got another of the targets that Rick was looking for, the bright Yellow-green Grosbeak. We also managed to find the tiny canopy-loving Spot-tailed Antwren that had only heard before on the tour. We also had a weird experience, when, while we were birding, we passed a pair of bird trappers that were targeting specific species to capture and then sell. This is sadly not uncommon in Suriname and typically they target seedeaters which are now quite scarce in the wild but often seen in cages. Happily, it does not seem to affect the birding in the country for the most part, and most of the rarities remain untouched but hopefully this practice goes into decline soon with greater awareness and education on these issues.

We had a final morning to bird in Colakreek before having to pack up and head to the airport in the afternoon. Therefore, we targeted a couple of specific birds we had not yet seen by that time. Normally quite easy around the campgrounds of the lodge, Cayenne Jays made us work for them on this tour, although we finally managed to see them during this final birding session in the area. We also got the loud Variable Chachalaca for our second lifer of the day. We then did some extra birding in a couple of different locations, where we pumped up the birdlist with quality new trip birds like Point-tailed Palmcreeper, Red-bellied and Red-shouldered Macaws, Blue-chinned Sapphire, and Sulphury Flycatcher.

Black-spotted Barbet is actually named after the female, and the "Cola" colored creeks (next page) of the area

We closed the tour at the international airport of Suriname where we said goodbye to Sean. While working the final checklist of the trip we reviewed all the fantastic birds we managed to find, and we could not feel luckier. Of course, we worked hard for some of them, but we certainly had a great time on this tour to a relatively rarely visited part of South America

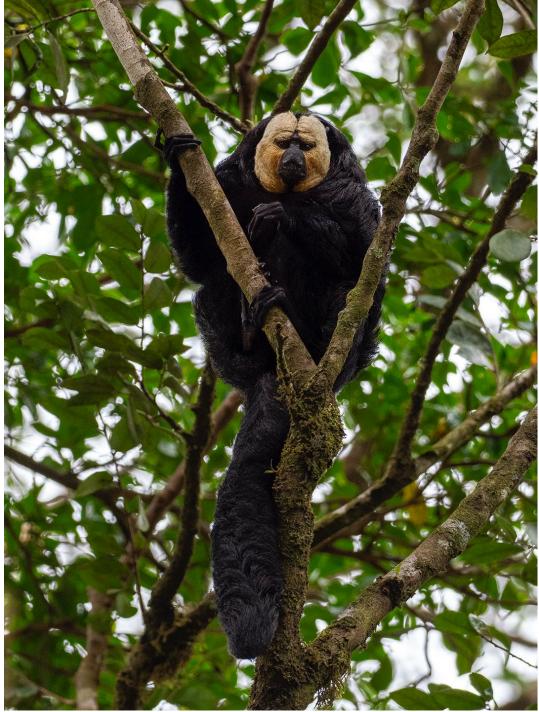

Crimson-hooded Manakin is one of the birds that made us work for it but finally gave in to our considerable efforts and is therefore a great species to close this report. I hope you enjoyed it!

FINAL CHECKLIST:

A total of 364 species of BIRDS were recorded on this tour. Out of this total, 39 were Heard Only (H) with 3 seen only by the Tour Leader (L). We recorded 11 MAMMAL species, which sounds like a small number but we certainly had some great "furries" like Midas Monkey (Golden-handed Tamarin), a male Guianan Red Howler Monkey, a gorgeous White-faced Saki and a surprising Brazilian Porcupine that was amazingly spotted by Rick while it was sleeping in the canopy!

The Best Birds of the Trip were: 1. Capuchinbird, 2. Guianan Red-Cotinga, 3. Gray-winged Trumpeter, 4. Crimson Topaz, and 5= Guianan Cock-of-the-rock AND White-winged Potoo

White-faced Saki was a great mammal find in Brownsberg
